

Trailers- open or enclosed?

Posted by Gino230 - 22 Sep 2013 07:22

Right now I have a 12' enclosed that I use to tow my motorcycles. Not big enough for a car, obviously.

I'm looking at towing options, I'd like to trade up to a larger enclosed but storage is a bit of a problem- I think I can make a 20' work, but that's the max, unless I make some adjustments (like cutting down a tree in the yard).

I notice alot of you use open trailers. Any pros or cons to either approach?

Most of my races are less than 100 miles away. Couple times a year maybe going a bit farther.

What is the smallest enclosed that will handle a 944?

Thanks guys!

=====

Re: Trailers- open or enclosed?

Posted by ChuckS - 24 Sep 2013 08:45

I have used a 20' enclosed for over 15 years. Great size for a 944. Can do everything except live in it with the car in it.

One friend has a 16'. Car fits, tire rack over the front of the car. Tools in the Truck. I think it is a little too small, but it can work. The 22' that Ron mentions is a hard size to find, but very nice.

Hope this helps.

Chuck

=====